HOG ISLAND YARD NEARLY FINISHED

Completion Within Ten Weeks, With Fifty Vessels Under Way

222 KEEL LAID DOWN

The twenty-second keel was laid today at Hog Island. The vessel will be the Scharlie, a standardized 1500-ton freighter.

The Hog Island shipyard will be completed within ten weeks.

When the last of shipyard construction work is ended, fifty ships will be in the process of construction, provided the present schedule of three keels a week is maintained.

Announcement of the rapid progress in the building of the yard was made this afternoon by Admiral Bowles, assistant general manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

At present, work on the organization buildings and equipment is going on at the rate of two per cent a week, he said, stating the completion of the world's largest shipyard early in August.

As twenty-two keels have already been laid, and increasing regularity in steel shipments indicates that the schedule will not only be maintained but may be exceeded, it is probable that when the last shipyard is completed work will have been started on the second contract. This contract is for seventy 3000-ton transports.

First Launching in August
The program of the yard calls for fifty shipwrecks, and as soon as one vessel is launched, a keel is to be laid to take its place. The first launching has been promised by the shipyard on the fourth of August. The first ship to be launched is the Scharlie, a standardized 1500-ton freighter.

WAR SEPARATES BOYHOOD CHUMS

Inseparable companions since boyhood, when they sold newspapers on the same corner, James Farley and Leo V. McDonald, who lived at 1906 and 1908 East Madison street, respectively, are now thousands of miles apart. Farley (above to the left), who is a sergeant, is seeing service with General Pershing overseas, whereas McDonald, also a sergeant (above to the right), is stationed "somewhere in America."

EIGHTEEN ARE HELD IN ELECTION CASES

Division Officers and Vane Republicans Accused of Obstructing Voting

Eighteen election officers and Vane Republicans were held in $500 bail each for count this afternoon by Magistrate Stevenson, on warrants issued by the "Committee of Seventy."

They are charged with challenging and depriving voters of their franchise at the primary last week.

Many additional warrants for similar offenses and for intimidation, illegal assistance and abetting illegal voting, will be sworn out within the next few days, according to Edward L. D. Roach, secretary of the Committee of Seventy.

They will include warrants for a Vane ward leader and member of the Republican city committee; a highway inspector and an employee of the Recorder of Deeds' office, Roach announced.

To date the Committee of Seventy has prosecuted about sixty-five cases of election offenses, and has secured the release of twenty-five others arrested last week on similar charges were held in the same amount of bail by the magistrate.
